Proceedings of the eighth annual SIGCPR conference June 1970
The management of the University of Nebraska Computing Center (UNCC) is faced with primarily two tasks. The first task is making decisions in accordance with externally imposed conditions, such as physical resources and policies established by the University administration.
The second task is making decisions according to UNCC internal policies and professional staff needs. With respect to the second task, it became apparent during planning sessions that management had available various sou ...
